Q.No	Question	CO	Marks
Q1	 The diagram above represents the relationships among four orders in terms of “required quantity” and “vulnerability”. However, this is a wrong representation. Draw a different pyramid and mark the orders in terms of vulnerability and required quantity. You don’t have to explain the diagram. The diagram should be self explanatory with proper arrow marks.	CO4	5
Q2	Read the quote given below. Draw a diagram about the cyclical relationship among the four orders that represent the quote. “As members of the human order, we aren’t completing any circle. We’re just a straight line heading toward a cliff” PTO	CO3	5

Q3	See the diagram given above. What do the arrow marks and order (1,2,3&4) imply here? Explain your take on this.	CO2	5
Q4	As an individual, your happiness depends upon the prosperity in every family, not just your family. Why? Elaborate your justification.	CO1	5
Q5	Differentiate between natural acceptance and preconditioning with suitable examples.	CO1	5
Q6	Essay Question Feelings are important in maintaining healthy and harmonious relationships. Positive feelings such as gratitude, glory, and trust help us value others, strengthen relationships, and develop mutual understanding. They guide our behaviour in personal, social, and professional life. Based on the above context, answer the following questions: a) A college student, Ashima secures first position in a university-level innovation competition. During the award ceremony, she remembers the continuous support of her teachers, parents, and teammates who guided and motivated her throughout the project. Identify and explain the feeling of Glory & Gratitude in this situation and suggest two ways by which Ashima can express gratitude towards those who contributed to her excellence. b) In human relationships, we often expect others to trust our intentions, while at the same time we tend to judge others mainly on the basis of their competence before trusting them. Explain this statement with suitable real-life examples.	CO4	5+5
